8 次の英文を読んで、あとの設問に答えなさい。

A *military commander in the Samurai era sent salt to his *enemy who *lacked it. We can't live without salt, like water or air. Getting salt has been a *concern since the beginning of human history. Wars have even happened between countries over salt. So, the (ア) of the commander was amazing.

Salt is *essential for our lives. Besides, it gives us many *benefits. Let's see some of them. First, salt makes food delicious. *Fermented food like miso and cheese can't be made without salt. Also, salt preserves food for a long time. For example, when a lot of salt is used to make umeboshi, it can be preserved for many years, sometimes even more than 100 years.

Moreover, salt is useful in many *areas of our daily lives. Water *freezes at 0℃, but salt *prevents water from freezing until it reaches -20℃. When salt is *sprinkled on the streets in winter in cold areas, the streets don't freeze easily. ↗ It helps us walk and drive more safely. Also, salt is used to make some kinds of plastic, glass and many other kinds of products.

Salt is important so it has been *closely *related to our lives. In the past, there were many roads called "salt roads". "A salt road" is a *trade *route (ウ). The oldest and longest salt route in Japan was between Niigata and Shizuoka. It had two parts, the North Salt Route and the South Salt Route. The *junction of the two routes was in Shiojiri in Nagao. The name Shiojiri means "the end of salt". It tells us that both the North and South salt routes (エ) in Shiojiri. Salt was brought from Niigata and Shizuoka to Shiojiri. Like this, we can find many cities or towns with "salt" in their names around the world.

Is the story about the military commander true or not? We don't know. But many people think we should ↗ be like the commander. We should share something essential in our lives with others even if they are our enemies. Animals never do that but only we humans can *behave in such a beautiful way.
